

JPay Design & Style Guidelines

Overview

Clean, modern design characterized by lots of white space, modern typography, limited text. Inspired by marketing and advertising implemented by tech companies such as Apple.

Editorial

Simplified text featuring short, declarative phrases and sentences.

One phrase titles.

e.g., "It's Here."

Two phrase subtitles or one longer phrase.

e.g., "JPay Mobile. Better than ever.", "It just got easier."

Use verbs or gerunds as much as possible.

e.g., "Sending Money.", "Engaging Games."

Body text should be a mix of short sentences and bullet points.

e.g., "Send email and money to inmates conveniently, on your Android device.

Download the free app here."

No exclamation points or exclamatory phrases.

e.g. "Go JPay Mobile today!"

In general, no solicitous or condescending language.

e.g. extensive use of "loved one", "your inmate", etc.

For B2C ads and materials, we will move to a softer approach, which will be determined by the creative briefs and overall direction of Marketing. This may include specific language like "trust", "loved one" (or something similar), but sparsely used. For these ads, we still want to use a sparse, direct style, not solicitous or condescending.

No extensive use of "inmate" or "prisoner". If we have to say it, say it once and move on.

Language users can easily understand.

Avoid industry terms, such as "interface", "look and feel", etc.

Design

Typefaces

- Print: Myriad Pro.
- Screen: Roboto.
- B2B print: Artifika.

Sizes

- Title: large
- Subtitle. Approx. 50% of title.
- Body, bullets. Slightly smaller than subtitle.

Capitalization

- Titles. Initial caps all words: “Sending Money.”
- Subtitle. Initial cap first word: “It just got easier.”
- Body: normal.

Alignments

- Generally, align left.
- Posters or certain ad layouts may look better with centered alignment.
- Avoid multiple alignments. Share alignments when possible, e.g., in “It's Here.”, the body text aligns with the right side of the image.

Logo

- Gil sans treatment of “jpay”
- On dark background, logo should be white
- On white or light background, logo may be within dark circle.

Spacing

Lots of white space, clean look.

Required Elements

- Contact info: url/email address/phone.
 - Positioned at bottom of page, justified alignment, color gray.
- Logo, tag line.
 - Positioned at bottom, aligned right. Baseline of logo text should always line up with the baseline of the tag line.

Images

- Focus on product shots (especially for B2B), emphasizing that we are a software technology company, and highlighting our new look and feel, with which we are trying to brand all our products.
- When showing our screen shots of our products, they should be placed inside an attractive device like a phone, tablet, monitor, etc. Devices should generally face straight towards the camera.
- For B2C, the focus may shift towards the personal side, showing people who are like our target demographic, in portrait poses or if possible, using our products.
- People shots should avoid excessive expressions of happiness. We want shots of people who are satisfied or content because we have helped them take care of a problem. We can also try shots showing people with a “determined” expression.
- Treatments of people shots may include use of vignettes or a fade on the image or other approaches. Try to place the image within the context of our simple, clean, fresh look.
